MILLIONS STOLEN IS CLAIM

SIX OFFICIALS ARE INDICTED BY GRAND JURY FOR HUGE FRAUD

SAN FRANCISCO, July 6.— The Federal grand jury today indicted three United States Shipping Board officials for conspiracy and frauds whereby the government is alleged to have been defrauded of vast sums of money—said to approximate $1,000,000—through fraudulent sales of surplus government property at the Liberty shipyards of the Emergency Fleet corporation in Alameda in 1922.

Those indicted are:

R. H. Borland, 1415 Clay street, San Francisco, local manager San Francisco department purchases and supplies, United States Shipping Board.

D. H. Meisenbach, 451 Twenty-eighth street, Oakland, district director of sales, United States Shipping Boaarl, Emergency Fleet Corporation, Liberty Island, Alameda.

T. G. Baird, 16 California street, San Francisco, United States Shipping Board, director of Oregon District.

A. G. Camp, 518 Twenty-seventh street Oakland, civilian, clerk.

O. J. Soegaard, 16 California street, San Francisco, clerk for Iron and Metal Company.

Bail in each instance was fixed at $3,500.

The indictment avers twenty-three fraudulent methods followed by the alleged conspirators following a meeting on October 7, 1922, by which they sold government properties among themselves for "prices known to them not to be the best price attainable" and resale of same at vastly increased prices.

The property thus handled, according to the indictment, was at the Liberty Yard, Alameda, and was authorized to be sold by the U. S. Shipping Board Emergency Corporation as "surplus materials."

Tolerance Is Pleaded For By U. S. Senator

Making a plea for peace within our own country and tolerance of the political, business or religious opinions of others, Senator Samuel M. Shortridge yesterday delivered an eloquent address before the members of the Richmond Rotary Club at their weekly luncheon. He stated that hatred or envy of people who may differ from you in these opinions does not augur well for the prosperity of our nation.

Shortridge said that these people are just as good and high minded Americans as you are that all these different political and religious faiths must work in harmony.

Postmaster James N. Long acted as chairman of the day.

The garage is completed, and stands on the corner of Alhambra avenue and Ward street. It is one of the finest in the county and the location one of the best, being on the main thoroughfare from Oakland.

A womens' rest room with wicker furniture, is a fine feature of the place, and the service room in the rear is fully equipped to handle a large volume of business. Nothing has been omitted that might give comfort, service or right appearance.

3 New Members Are Admitted By Builders Exchange

Three new members were taken into the Contra Costa County Builders Exchange last night at a well attended and interesting meeting at the Exhange building on Fourteenth street. New members are being received in rapid succession, and the exchange is favored with the best of conditions. Building and the problems connected therewith came up for extended discussion during the meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. L. R. French, have returned from their honeymoon trip to the southern part of the state.

Great Fight Card Is Held At Opera House

The several hundred fight fans who attended the regular semi-monthly show staged last evening in the Point Richmond Opera House under the auspices of the Nedderman Athletic Club, were probably treated to as good a card of four-round bouts as any of them have ever witnessed. Practically every scrap on the program was crammed full of action from start to finish and had the fans on their feet until the final gong spelled the close of the show.

McFarland Beats Seally

Although Lew Dennison, young Denver lightweight, and Al Walker, colored scrapper from West Oakland, were announced as the main event of the evening, the best mill turned out to be that between Johnny McFarland of Albany and Bert Seally of Martinez. McFarland, who is an employee at the Standard Oil refinery here, won the decision, but only after four rounds of exciting going.

McFarland ran up a big lead in the first part of the fight when he battered Seally with long lefts and some wicked rights to the face, and had the little Swede on the verge of a knock-out several times. Seally was a tough customer, however, taking all McFarland had to offer and giving plenty in return in the last part of the scrap.

Both boys were in a bad way at the close of the fight but McFarland copped the decision because of the number of telling and clean punches landed by him throughout. The Albany lad made the Swede hit the floor several times but Seally was too tough to knock out.

Dennison Scores Knock-out

In the main event of the evening, Lew Dennison of Denver made short work of Al Walker of Oakland, knocking him out in the first round with a right to the nose.

Another scrap which took down the house was that between Jimmy Reisner of Oakland and Joe Oaks of West Oakland, which was won by the former. Oaks looked good in the opening round but found the going tough in the last three and got in bad with the fans with his tactics of hanging onto the ropes and laying down on the floor. Reisner fought a clean fight throughout and got a big hand when Referee Frankie Neil gave him the nod in the middle of the fourth round.

Davis Makes Come-Back

Jack Davis, former conductor of Oakland, made a comeback in the fight game by stopping Young Mike Gibbons of Oakland in the fourth round. It was also a slugging bee with Davis landing the cleaner punches.

Jesse Clinton of Oakland, substituting for Young Brooks, gave Charlie Sims of Albany a fine pasting. Clinton had Sims punch drunk after the first round, the referee stopping the affair in the third.

Fight Card Excellent

If possible the card was even better than the initial show of two weeks ago. The fans showed their appreciation for the excellence of the bouts by giving a big hand at the close of the show. It may take a little while to develop the game here but it is bound to go over big if the good quality of the fights is maintained The next show will be two weeks hence.

$1,000,000 Fire Destroys Entire Town of Goldfield

TONOPAH (Nev.), July 6.—A fire, believed to be of incendiary origin, razed the town of Goldfield today, there being only six buildings left standing after a nine hour conflagration. One man is dead, a woman is missing, many persons were treated for burns, and a loss estimated at from $800,000 to $1,500,000 are results of the fire. Fire Chief I. N. Calliac of Goldfield declared that he believed an enemy of a known bootlegger started the blaze.

Relief to the extent of $3.745 and caravans of automobiles and trucks laden with food hav ebeen sent to the stricken place. A group of miners shacks on the outskirts of the town are being rehabilitated under the direction of a relief committee which is looking after the homeless. The Elks club is lending aid in the relief work. Residents who had fled to the mountains with their belongings, were returning tonight.

Van D. McArthur is the only known casualty, and an unknown woman is missing and believed to have perished.

85 PERCENT OF BOOTLEGGERS ALIENS, REPORT OF AGENT SHOWS

Fully eight-five per cent of the violators of the national prohibition law in this district are of foreign birth, and only a few of them have acquired citizenship, according to a report made to Prohibition Commissioner Ray Haynes by Prohibition Director Samuel F. Rutter, it was announced yesterday.

From January 11 to May 1 of this year, there have been $1,388 arrests for violations of the dry law and property valued at $119,050 has been seized. In 1922, for the entire year, property valued at $145,762 was seized.

Sixty per cent of places selling liquor two years ago, according to Rutter's report, have been put out of business, and eighty-five per cent of the places where easy purchases have been made have gone out of business.

Heavier fines are being imposed by the judges of the Federal Court than two years ago, jail sentences are being given, and, according to Rutter, juries are less prone to accept excuses.

Smuggling from Canada and Mexico continues a most difficult problem and seizure has been made of 5,000 cases of whisky landed from these sources. In the last few months the Coast Guard has seized two boats with cargo of 800 cases of Canadian liquor and the shore is being patroled by automobiles, Rutter, reported. He declares, though, that fast sea going boats are needed.

The arrests for 1923 are beginning to show a decided falling off, as evidence against violators is more difficult to obtain. According to Prohibition Director Rutter, California is second only to New York in the number of arrests made for violations of the dry law.

Official Paper of the City of Richmond

BEST IN THE WORLD

No other nation in the world gives to its citizens a mail service comparable with that of the United States. The citizens of no other counry can communicate with each other or with the outside world at so small a cost as they can in this country. No other country even remotely approaches the United States in the amount of mail handled. In fact the American postal system handles one-third of the whole worlds mail, including in number all the pieces handled by Great Britain, Germany, France, and Russia combined. The mail of New York city alone is greater than that of the Dominion of Canada.

No mail service equals that of the United States in the speed with which letters are transported to great distances. In no other country may citizens mail such large and heavy packages by parcel post. No other country is so honeycombed with rural free delivery routes or approaches the service furnished by the United States to its rural inhabitants, either in the richest farming regions or in the sparsely settled sections, where the hermit of the mountain or desert dwells.

For two cents, the citizen of Miami Fla., may send a letter to Point Barrow Alaska, or to the Philippine Islands by domestic mail. A still greater distance may be reached, however, for two cents by international mail, by which a one ounce letter may be sent from Point Barrow to Terra Del Fuego, at the most southern point of South America. For that matter, the two cent stamp will carry an ounce letter to any country in the western hemisphere with the exception of Chile, French and Dutch Guiana, Venezuela, and the islands of Martinique and Guadalupe.

Two cents will carry an ounce letter to Great Britain and to far off New Zealand in the South seas, but an answer from either place requires a three cent stamp. Spain and its African colonies may be reached for two cents, but the reply postage will cost five cents. Any other country in the world may be reached for five cents, although it was only sixty years ago when a letter to Australia cost $2.04.

An idea of the firm foundation on which the American postal service is built, may be visualized by the fact that it was the only country in the world the personnel of which was not demoralized or seriously crippled during the world war. In the other countries, deliveries were cut one-third and the service maintained only by the drafting of womn to carry the mails.

The United States is the only country of importance where pre-war postage rates are still maintained. For 20 months during the war, letter rates were increased to three cents but the extra cent was levied as a tax to assist in carrying on the war and no portion of it accrued to the postal service.

The American railway mail service is the greatest in the world, principally, of course, on account of the immense railway systems of this country. Because of the great preponderance of mail in this country, more mechanical contrivance and labor saving devices are utilized in its dispatch, probably than all of the other countries combined.

Another feature of which the American citizen may well be proud is the freedom of the United States mails from censorship. While other countries are noted for a propensity for "cracking seals" the American service stands out for its insistence of maintaining inviolate the contents of its citizen's mail.

A MEASURE OF DEBT

One year ago, according to the World Almanac, a standard and accepted authority, France owed 316,984,988,953 francs, including her floating debt of 87,000,000,000 in round figures. Making an extravagant allowance for exchange conditions, we may safely assume that the internal and external debt of France is now approximately forty billions of dollars, three quarters of which represents engagements made on account of the war. This sum does not represent her losses as a result of the German invasion: it represents the sum expended while fighting for her life. To it must be added the depreciation of property laid waste and the losses incurred by the disarrangement of her internal industries.

It is impossible to say what Germany owes, but a year ago, when the mark was worth far more than it is today, the Bankers' Trust Company of New York estimated that the German debt was less than two million dollars. It may be safely assumed that it is entirely neglible as compared with the war debt of France, Great Britain or the United States. Germany's loans during the war were almost exclusively internal, and these loans have been fully acquitted with paper. She was not invaded, her territory is intact, her means of production and her resources generally are what they were in 1921 and she is rid of a military establishment that cost her a billion a year. If she were called upon to pay $50,000,000 in gold, it would not work any greater hardship upon her than the war has inflicted upon France, including ruin wrought in the devastated areas.

If the German indemnity is fixed at a penny less than France owes, it will be an indemnity in reverse order, equivalent to the allies paying for reparations a sum equal to the difference between the French national debt and the sum actually exacted from Berlin.

DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION

After thinking it over, we have come to the conclusion that the next democratic national convention should be held in New Yorb City. The democrats, as a rule, put up their national convention to the highest bidder, and cities that are unable to furnish accommodations, such as Baltimore, Kansas City and San Francisco bid it in and delegates and alternates and boosters and rooters and camp followers generally travel to these places, sleep on cots, go without baths, fail to get sufficient to eat, fight wih one another, and return home unhappy, distrait and sometimes ill. Only the tank town folk who put up the money for the convention are satisfied.

New York can swallow a dozen conventions such as the democratic national and not even know it. There are actually hundreds of hotels, some of them housing 2000 persons or more and it will be no trouble at all to give every man who attends the big convention a room to himself with a private bath. And, the rates will not be boosted as they were in Baltimore, nor will delegates sleep on cots, behind curtains and screens in noisy hotel hallways, as they did in Kansas City.

Every road leads to New York, and it will be a pleasant trip for the far away delegates to go there and after they have stayed in New York a week they can go home with a liberal education; they will have seen a city, the like of which does not exist in America, or any other place.

Few Changes Are Made In The Game Laws

Fish and game laws in California will remain practically unchanged during the next two years. The few changes made were minor ones and will become effective on August 17.

The repeal of the existing law permitting the transportation of a deer from an open district to a closed district when an affidavit stating the time, place and by whom killed is attached to the carcass, stands out as the major change in the minds of most of the sportsmen. The repeal of the existing law makes it unlawful to transport venison from an open district to a closed district on or after August 17, according to the Fish and Game Commission.

Head, hide and horns may be transported from an open district to a closed district, the Fish and Game Commission told the Automobile Association, only upon receipt of a permit which will be granted upon application to the Commission's offices in San Francisco, Sacramento or Los Angeles.

The effect of this law will be to prevent the transportation of venison from the northern counties or the Sierra Nevada region into the Bay City districts except during the first 14 days in September. In other words there are only 14 days in which the open season in districts 1, 1 1-2, 4 1-2, 23, 24, 25 and 26 coincides with the open season in district 2, 2 1-2 and 3, which is the central Coast Range section.

Under the new law deer cannot be transported from the central Coast Range section into Los Angeles or San Bernardino county or south of these counties at any season of the year. However, Southern California hunters may kill deer in the extreme northern and the Sierra Nevada sections of the state and take them home during the period between and including September 16 and October 16.

Tree squirrels are to be given absolute protection for two years. One of the new laws passed at the recent session of the legislature and signed by Governor Richardson prohibits the killing of tree squirrels until September 1, 1925. The possession of extension automatic shotguns carrying more than [illegible] shells is prohibited under a new law.

Another change in the game laws changes the California law to conform with the Federal laws which prohibit the sale of wild ducks and geese.

Changes in the fish laws refer to the sale of striped bass, and increase the distance below a dam and above a fish screen within which it is unlawful to fish.

Effective August 17, the closed season for the possession and sale of striped bass over 10 pounds in weight will be from March 1 to May 31. This closed season was formerly from April 1 to May 31. The closed season for the sale of any striped bass under the new law will be from May 16 to July 31 and September 17 to November 14. It should be noted that the possession of striped bass is not affected during these two periods. At present the period during which the sale of striped bass is prohibited is from July 1 to July 31.

These extensions of the time limits during which the sale and possession of striped bass weighing 10 pounds or over and the sale of any striped bass is prohibited will not materially affect the angler, it is pointed out, as he is still allowed to take five striped bass a day weighing under 10 pounds at any time in the year.

The distance within which it is unlawful to take fish above any fish screen has been extended from 100 feet to 150 feet under the new law. Likewise the distance below any dam within which the taking of any fish is prohibited has been extended from 100 to 150 feet.

The limit on trout has been increased from twenty-five to thirty five per day. In Clear Lake the limit on black bass has been reduced from twenty-five to ten per day, effective August 17.

Heroism Of Phone Linemen Is Praised

Much has been written in praise of the telephone linemen who sacrifice all sorts of physical comfort to brave raging storms and expose themselves to dangers that telephone service may be unbroken, but tales of their deeds never cease to evoke words of admiration from editorial pens.

"There must be a lot of human nature in these telephone plant gangs," wrote the editor of the Moline 'Ill.) Dailey Dispatch recently, "and the telephone subscriber might well remember, when something does go wrong with the service, to put this spirit in the scales to balance it."

It seems that during a heavy storm a few months ago, Moline was within an area in which 6,000 telephone poles went down, thousands of miles of wire crumpled up, toll lines broken in every direction and $350,000 of damage done.

"Gangs of men throughout the storm area got out of their warm beds at two a. m. in order that we in Moline and elsewhere could have telephone service by breakfast time," wrote the editor. "There fellows, being human like the rest of us, would have preferred to have remained in bed till the usual getting up time. But when routed out they proved themselves, as before, to be real fellows. They jumped into the situation and worked night and day with smile and will, until equipment and service were again standard."

Negro Sought For Slaying of Young Girl

SCARSDALE (N. Y.), July 6.—Madeline Harmer, 16 years old, farmer's daughter, today was the best hope of Westchester county authorities to fasten on a missing negro the murder of Dorothy Kauffman, youthful Mennonite governness, whose slashed body was found Wednesday in the home of Magruder Craighead, where she is employed.

Miss Harmer, the slain girl's chum, said she had seen the negro loitering near the Craighead home on Tuesday a few hours before Miss Kauffman is believed to have been slain.

Other witnesses told of seeing the negro.

Craighead, an engineer for the H. W. Johns-Manville Company, had gone away for the holiday with his family, leaving Miss Kauffman alone in the Craighead home. Miss Harmer visited her in the forenoon Tuesday and made an appointment to spend the night with her. Arriving about 2.30 a. m. Wednesday, after attending a dance, she found Miss Kauffman's body, bearing seven stab wounds, on the floor beside her bed.

'Skin Deep' Is Drawing Crowds At T. & D. Theater

The wholesome beauty, grace and charm of Florence Vidor, Thomas H. Ince's classic star, is strikingly demonstrated in her part as a nurse in Ince's startling picture, "Skin Deep."

As the nurse in charge of a convalescent crook who was frightfully maimed in an airplane fall while making his thrilling escape from prison, Miss Vidor has the difficult task of implanting in the soul of the crook the desire to abandon his career of crime.

Returning to her patient's' room one morning, she finds that he has fled. Which road did he take—the one leading back to his old haunts in the underworld, or the new and open road pointed out by his new-made friends?

Sport Notes

With the navy championship nine of the U. S. S. California as their opponents, the Pierce Giants, Oakland colored aggregation, will dedicate the First street ball park as Pierce Field with a game tomorrow afternoon. The colored tossers have taken a year's lease on the local park and will use it as their home diamond in the future.

The navy is considered the strongest nine in the Pacific Fleet, and well capable of furnishing the Giants with plenty of competition. Reid and Morris, star hurlers, are available for work on the mound for the colored nine tomorrow.

A concert by Whaley's orchestra and dedication ceremonies will be added features of the day's program. Ex-Mayor E. J. Garrard is slated to pitch the first ball over the plate, while Fire Chief Roy Lemoin will catch it. The ball game will start at 3 o'clock.

The Crockett club is the winner of the first half of the Three C League following its victory over the Concord nine in the play-off last Sunday at Pittsburg. Peppin, star second baseman of the Mechanics in the Twilight League, performed brilliantly at short for the winners.

The schedule for the first week of the second half of the league follows:

July 8

Martinez at Crockett.
Antioch at Pittsburg.
Concord at Brentwood.

J. O. Redman and J. L. Smith, well known Richmond residents, are included in the entrants in the big horseshoe tournament to be staged tomorrow at Bushrod Park Oakland. The tourney will be participated in by 160 barnyard golfers from all parts of Central California and bids fair to be the biggest event of its kind ever to be staged in this part of the state.

Tub Spencer, former All Standard catcher, has been signed to catch for the Stockton club in the second half of the San Joquin Valley League. Spencer was released by the Madera team but the Stockton management lost little time in signing the corpulent receiver to replace Battalina, who is leaving for other parts.

Efforts are being made by the managers of the San Pablo Merchants and the Pierce Giants for a game to be played between these two fast clubs in the near future. If played the contest would take place at the First street ball park and would doubtless attract a banner crowd.

The San Pablans looked none too strong when they started the season but have since strengthened their lineup and have been aided by the successful comeback of Bettencourt, star local pitcher of several years ago. New stars signed to cavort with the San Pablo nine are Don O'Loan, Pat O'Rourke and Walter Lane.

Val Flohs, who has been managing the San Pablo outfit has moved to Stockton, and Judge L. Grover and Toddy Dutra are now looking after the interests of the team.

Pat Bohen, former local twirler and big league star, is now staging a real comback with the Vallejo team Although out of the game for several years, Pat has been pitching winning ball for the Napa county aggregation.

Twilight League fans are beginning to comment on the excellent work of Emmett Daley, third sacker for the Mechanics. Although his work is not particularly spectacular, it has been consistent and steady from the start of the season. Daley is also cracking the sphere hard, his double in Thursday's game driving home the winning runs for the Mechanics.

Manager Archie Prowse of the Wanderers announces the release of Don O'Loan, catcher, who has been with the team since the start of the season. O'Loan was immediately grabbed up by the San Pablo Merchants, who will use him to share the receiving with Cacky Moitoza.

Elmer Hansen, formerly with the All Standards, is having a wonderful season with the Benicia club which is now considered one of the leading bush teams of the state by virtue of its two defeats of the strong Napa team. Hansen is a nice ball player and would fit in nicely with several clubs in the Twilight League.

New Highway To Bring Many To California

Increased motor tourist travel into California will result from the opening of the Banff-Windermere highway in British Columbia, Harvey M. Toy, chairman of the California Highway Commission told this week on his return from ceremonial opening of the road.

This road also makes the Canadian R kies accessible to California motorists, Toy said.

"In the future," Toy said "California will be the objective of motorists traveling south from Banff and Lake Louise as they can now come directly to California and San Francisco over the California Banff Bee-Line Highway. Much of this traffic formerly returned to the United States through Montana and Idaho to Salt Lake City."

Toy represented California at the opening of the Banff-Windermere highway and was the guest of the Minister of the Interior and the Commissioner of National Parks in Canada.

"Building a great screen drama is no child's play," stated Emory Johnson, the famous producer of the stupendous motion picture production "Westbound Limited" which will be the attraction at the Macdonald theater today.

"Aside from the acting of the players," he continued, "and the intrinsic value of the story, there is the great crying need of realism. Every ambitious motion picture director strives for realism. If he stages a big fire scene he first of all wants it to be realistic. When he films a fight scene he wants it to resemble a real, bonafide combat, and not a fake. Motion picture audiences during the past few years have learned to be supercritical. They are very quick to realize if anything insincere or untrue to life is being put over on them.

"In staging 'Westbound Limited,' in which I endeavored to portray the real life and trials of a railroad man, I, at all times, wanted it to be a real story of real railroad people. I wanted it to be a picture that the real engineer, fireman or conductor could enjoy without having to laugh at the technical blunders. Consequently I had as many as a half dozen railroad men at my elbow almost every minute of the time that I was producing the picture. They assisted me and really supervised all the railroad scenes. Therefore, all the details in the railroad episodes, ranging from throwing a switch to the near crash of the two passenger trains in "Westbound Limited," was astually filmed under the personal supervision of railroad men."

Aunt Mary Ann says I don't know a thing about this auto-suggestion business, but I know I get to feelin' fidgety every time anybody starts talkin' about chicken mites."

OLD FRIENDS FIND A NEW INTEREST

"Oh, say, Tom! Wait a minute. I want to ask you something.

"Why, hello, Bob! Did you just get in?"

"Yes, And say, man, I've sure been in God's country. The wife and I started at daybreak this morning in the old bus and reached a spot which is destined to be our playground during our vacation."

"Gee, that sounds good. Wish I had known, I'd have loaded the wife and kids into our car and trailed behind you."

"I was just about to say that I tried to get you by phone last night and ask you if you cared to come with us, but I couldn't get you for some reason or other. I tried several times, but finally gave up and went to bed."

"That's too bad. We went to the show last night, and you probably called while we were on our way home."

"Well, anyway, that's past, but I do hope that you can get your vacation the same time I get mine, so we can go up to this little haven of beauty and rest together."

'I'll sure try, Bob. It will be easy to arrange it, I believe. Are you going down town now?"

"Want a ride?"

"Yes. I'm going to Cherry's at 528 13th street. They had a suit in the window that sure looked good to me and I"m going down to buy it."

"Well, I do say! So you buy your clothes there, too. I just bought a new one there last week. They have a fine line of men's clothing. Good patterns, good workmanship and excellent values, and the most generous credit accommodations, too. My wife bought a stunning suit for herself and school coats for our two girls at Cherry's Ladies' Store at 515 13th street yesterday.—Adv.

QUEBEC HONORS WORTHY CITIZENS AS WELL AS WAR HEROES

WOLFE – MONTCALM MONUMENT

Quebec is essentially a city of monuments. Every old house and church is wreathed in historical lore and legend and many modern buildings occupy famous sites. As the years pass by, the number of bronze and marble memorials raised in honor of men who were dominating characters in the early life of the city and province as well as to military heroes, grows apace.

For over a century Quebec was almost constantly a battle-ground on which a British-French duel was fought. Here was endured the long agony of the Iroquois Indian warfare; here were staged the sieges of Admiral Kirk in 1629 and of Sir William Phips in 1690. But the greatest battle fought over these historic cliffs was that of the Plains of Abraham when the British General Wolfe stealthily scaled the supposedly impregnable walls of the French stronghold with 5,000 men and won a lasting victory for British arms. Both Wolfe and Montcalm, the French leader, met their deaths through this battle. That the victory was one of more than military prestige is proclaimed by the stately shaft that stands in the Governor's Garden above Dufferin Terrace between the Citadel and Chateau Frontenac, and which was raised to the memory of these two heroes.

However, not only military achievements are associated with the Plains of Abraham, but they remind us of Abraham Martin, the first Canadian Scotsman and the first St. Lawrence River pilot, who received this ground as a grant from Champlain, the founder of Quebec. Although a Scot by birth, Martin was born in France, and accepting the land from his government, redeemed it from the wilderness, practised carpentry and taught himself to navigate the St. Lawrence River, thus making himself the first and most valuable pilot on the river, up and down which passed all traffic between New France and Europe.

Besides the Wolfe - Montcalm monument there is a fine one to Wolfe, another to Champlain standing on a prominent site with the whole city spread about its founder; and still another fine memorial to Queen Victoria. Other memorials are scattered about the city's outskirts, including one to Jacques Cartier, the discoverer of Canada; and a 65-foot fluted bronze column bearing on opposite sides the names of Murray and de Levis and the arms of the British and French.

Every foot of ground in this ancient capital is historic ground; the Post Office stands on the site of an Indian Fort built in 1649; the Roman Catholic Seminary and Laval University occupy the farm of Louis Hebert, the land of which he cleared and on which he built the first house in Quebec, while the towering Chateau Frontenac rises above the ashes of Chateau St. Louis, colonial headquarters for 200 years, part of the foundation stones of the old structure being included in today's modern hotel.

The skipper attended to the business in hand with a cool and unhurried enjoyment, an air of relish, of keen satisfaction. Indeed, since he had looked into the pictured eyes of Aline Lavergne and made his decision, there had come a new flash into his eye, a new resolution into his manner. Strange, that a photograph should so sway the mind of such a man, even to altering his very life course!

The safe open, he laid bare the drawers within. One by one he removed them for his inspection. If he had expected treasure, he found it—not in money, but in the jewels of dead women; glittering things, heirlooms of vanity and love. Into the man's face came a fiercely predatory air.

"Lord!" he exclaimed throatily. "I've seen the time when I'd have—"

He did not finish. He had drawn forth a packet of papers, heart-sacred documents of the family's past. These he opened and read, coolly and deliberately, quite ignoring the obvious fact that he was violating the first principles of a gentleman. In five minutes he had absorbed from these papers a tremendous amount of information about the family.

He Drew Out a Thick Package.

There was little else in the safe to repay his exploration. Last of all, he drew out a thick package, wrapped, sealed heavily, and addressed to Aline Lavergne. After turning it over in his hands, Captain Wrexham calmly broke the seals and inspected the contents.

He found it to be a book—rather an astonishing book, too.

Sitting down comfortably in the desk chair, Captain Wrexham puffed his cigar alight and gave his attention to the volume in hand. Evidently, John Philbrick had had this book made. It was a thick book with blank leaves, bound in leather; upon the cover, stamped in gold, were the words: "The Book of Aline, Her Beauty—For Her Eyes Only—by John Philbrick, Gent."

"John Philbrick, Gent.!" commented the skipper sardonically. "A rum go, I call it!"

He opened the volume, and gained his first information that John Philbrick was a poet.

Upon the blank pages, Philbrick had laboriously and beautifully inscribed his own verses, most of them tributes personal and delicate to the girl whom he loved. Wrexham glanced through the pages, reading a line here and there. Then he tossed the book carelessly back into its place and sat in moody silence, his fingers curling about his square brown beard.

"I've lived too long, that's what's the trouble," he said at last, with a sigh. For a little he was silent again, then he broke forth petulantly.

"What've I got out of it all, now that I'm here? Not much. Lechery o' women in the high latitudes, and strength o' men in the low; well, I've held up my end with 'em all, bad and worse! Now I'm here, with some money in my fist—and the picture of a girl tellin' me to be good. That's h—l for you! No h—l worse than that; to see what you can't ever have again, but might ha' had once!

"Don't know what's got into me, for a fact. Runnin' true to form, I ought to load up this junk in the Nautilus an' go about my business somewhere down the Caribbean. Anyhow, I want to sight that girl in the flesh, just to satisfy myself that pictures lie—just to have the pleasure o' saying, 'I told you so!' They aren't made like her, I tell you! Not possible. And who'd think that old grayheard rascal was a poet, eh? Only last night he was wild drunk. If I could get drunk now, maybe it'd help some."

He sat with his head sunk, his beard brushing over his white shirt, in an attitude of pessimistic gloom, of utter dejection.

What pictures he beheld in his mind's eye, what visions of past years, lost chances, sneered-down virtues, were for himself alone. The wonder was that a girl's picture had compelled this sea-wastrel into such a mood. Yet, perhaps, that picture had only come at the right moment to cast its weight into a long-wavering balance. Who can tell about these things?

Suddenly there was a sound. On the instant Wrexham became a different man.

A trampling of booted feet on the veranda—or "gallery," as is the southern term—and the man was out of his chair in a flash. So swift were his movements that they were almost incredible. Within five seconds he had closed the safe, swung and locked the case of decorations before it, and was on the other side of the room. He flung his dead cigar into the fire and took a fresh weed from the box.

The hall door opened. Uncle Neb appeared and said something in the patois. Wrexham did not understand. The old negro spoke in English.

"Sheriff Swords is heah, suh, an' he—"

"Ask the gentlemen in," said Wrexham, cold as ice. He stood passive, waiting, alert.

The two men who entered the room came to a dead halt at sight of Wrexham. Obviously the sight of him astonished them. The foremost, a burly person who wore a holstered revolver prominently displayed, was undoubtedly the sheriff.

"Well?" said Wrexham coolly. "Who are these gentlemen, Uncle Neb?"

"Ah!" said Wrexham. "Glad to meet you, gentlemen. My name's Tom Wrexham, master and owner of the Nautilus, anchored out yonder. How may I serve you?"

"Where's Philbrick?" demanded the sheriff, scowling a bit.

"You refer to Mr. Philbrick?" drawled Wrexham.

"Reckon I do."

"Well, Mr. Philbrick had sad news today." Wrexham sadly wagged his beard. "It seems that the owner of this place—a girl, ain't she?—is away in New Orleans or somewhere, and he got word only today that she wasn't expected to live after the accident—"

"What's this?" Macarty came forward with a cry. "What's this?"

The skipper regarded him coolly.

"I'm talkin'," he rejoined. "You see, the girl was run over by an auto, and she wanted to see Mr. Philbrick most particular. So he went off to see her that's all."

The ruse succeeded. Both visitors were flung off balance for the moment.

"Aline—an accident!" exclaimed Felix Macarty. "See here—we happen to know that Philbrick was on the place this very afternoon!"

Wrexham grinned. "Well, sir, if it makes you happy to know it, I'm not the man to object. Sit down, gentlemen! Have a drink."

Macarty watched him with an angry flush rising in his face. There was no denying that Felix was a handsome young devil, like his father; there was no caution in his face, however. Instead the face ran to a keen, sharp sophistication. It was touched with cruelty.

No weakness in it—none! A quick brain flamed behind the smoldering eyes. From thin lips to level brows, it was the face of one who had fought hard and cruelly. Wrexham knew the type for a bad one, knew well that this type would not break or yield.

"Has there been any accident?" said Macarty slowly.

"For all I know, there might ha' been," and Wrexham chuckled. The sheriff growled and drew forth a paper.

"Here's a warrant for Philbrick's arrest, charge of murder," he proclaimed. "I want him, and I mean to get him even if—"

"Get him, by all means!" said the skipper. "I suppose you'll go to New Orleans?"

"None o' that!" snapped the badgered officer. "He's on this here place, and if you're tryin' to hide him—"

Wrexham broke into a hearty laugh. "Take him with you by all means! I don't know where he is this minute, and that's a fact."

"I reckon I'll just take you along, too." The sheriff's hand moved toward the weapon at his belt. "You prob'ly know a good deal—"

Wrexham stiffened a trifle.

"You just try it on!" he said calmly, holding the cigar out in front of him. "You just try it on, that's all! I'll shoot two fingers off your hand before you can pull that gun, my man! If you want Philbrick, you can get him. If you want me—why, you just try it on!"

"Be careful," he said quietly; "this gentleman knows nothing. You'd better look for our man, though I'm afraid he's slipped us."

"That's sensible," put in Wrexham. "Oh, Uncle Neb! The sheriff wants to arrest Mr. Philbrick. Show him to where Mr. Philbrick is, and let him do his arresting. Look over the place, sheriff—she's all yours."

Smothering an oath, the sheriff turned and left the room.

Felix Macarty had not moved his gaze from the face of Wrexham. Now he came forward to the table, took a cigar from the box, lighted it. He was as cool as Wrexham himself.

"Pretty schooner of yours, cap'n," he said.

"True enough." Wrexham appeared mollified by this opening. "Sit down?"

Macarty nodded and dropped into a chair. Wrexham followed suit, and lighted his own cigar.

"Fast, isn't she?" asked Macarty. "She has lines, that craft."

"Fast? You ought to see her with a good following wind, not too stiff!" said the skipper with enthusiasm. "Let her out wing-and-wing, and I'll guarantee she'll walk over anything in the trades! Why, I remember once down in the Paumotus, there was a French gunboat poking around after us, one of those old tin pots that can do ten knots at a pinch!

"Well, sir, she pops out around the point of an island, not two miles away. We turned tail, I can tell you! She put two shots over us and two more in the water. By that time the old girl was walkin' away from her with the sails wet down and bone in her teeth—and we went on walkin', that's all! She'll do her fifteen if all's right."

Macarty nodded at this confidence. He fell to staring into the fire embers.

"Remarkable craft," he said after a bit. "By the way, I don't suppose you'd consider a charter, at high terms?"

"Might," said Wrexham. "High terms, high risks—eh? It all depends."

Macarty glanced at the door; it was closed. He shifted a little in his chair, so that he could better study the face of Wrexham.

"I know a man who could use such a craft," he said. "A Chinaman, named Ah Lee."

Wrexham nodded knowingly, and fingered his beard.

"Heard of him from Philbrick—he's makin' arrack and loadin' the black folk into h—l, ain't he? Well, I don't mind sayin' that I've carried liquor before this. So he'd give me a good charter! A partner of yours?"

"Of mine?" Felix Macarty smiled thinly. "My dear cap'n, I have no partners. Neither has Ah Lee. I have, however, turned over occasional deals to him, and he's a man of his word. I don't doubt that he'd make the charter to your advantage. What he deals in, I can't say. It might be rice liquor, and it might be other things."

"I see!" said Wrexham sagely. "A touch of hop, eh? All the better."

There was a little silence. Macarty was studying this man, so ready to break the law. Presently he spoke again.

"So old Philbrick got a hint and skipped out, eh? Let him go—he can't do much hurt from the brakes. Perhaps you know that my cousin owns this place?"

"Heard something about it," said Wrexham calmly.

"Very good. Since Philbrick is gone, I'll move in here until she returns from New Orleans. The place should be taken care of."

Wrexham chuckled in his beard.

"What about me?" he said dryly.

"You?" A surprise lightened in the eyes of Macarty. "Why, you—"

"Philbrick put the place in my care," explained Wrexham pleasantly. "Legal enough, I guess. Anyhow, I'm here."

Macarty was silent for a long moment; these words, pleasantly spoken, yet held a very strong significance. Captain Wrexham smoked and stared at the fire, ignoring the dark gaze that was fastened upon him.

"See here!" said Macarty suddenly, a stir of anger in his tone. "What's your game?"

Wrexham looked at him reflectively.

"Well, to tell the truth, I don't know! Wish I did. I might load the schooner with some of the pickings around here, and go away. I've been thinkin' of it, for a fact."

"What's your price?" queried Macarty bluntly.

"Did you ever see a man playin' straight because he was tired o' makin' crooked money?"

This oblique answer held Felix Macarty thoughtful for a moment. It was hard for him to understand the skipper. Gradually he had sensed antagonism here—a stone wall, hidden, yet powerful, through which he could find no opening.

Macarty rose and shook his cigar ashes into the fire. As he did so, he asked a question—asked it with elaborate carelessness.

PRESCRIPTION BOOZE LIMIT ON PHYSICIANS IS HELD AS ILLEGAL

HELENA, (Mont.), July 6.—Congress, having conferred upon physicians the discretionary right of prescribing liquor, cannot regulate the amount a physician may prescribe, United States District Judge Georg M. Bourquin held in substance today in a decision.

With reference to the maximum amount of liquor which the prohibition enforcement law states may be prescribed to any one patient, Judge Bourquin declared portions of the law unconstitutional, for the reason that patients are not alike, diseases are dissimilar and so the dosage cannot be fixed arbitrarily.

The court decision holds as invalid and unconstitutional those portions of the Federal prohibition enforcement act which limit the number of whiskey prescriptions a physician may write and the quantity of whisky which he many prescribe for any one person in a given period.

The court dismissed the three counts against Dr. J. B. Fraund of Butte, one of which charged him with writing more than 100 prescriptions in 90 days, a second charging he issued a permit for more than a pint of whiskey to one patient, and a third charging mal-practice.

"The physician with unrestricted power to begin a course of treatment must have like power to finish it," the decision said in part. The court also stated that "but so long as legislation tolerates or sanctions such uses of alcohol (for medical purposes) the duty and judgment of the physician, the necessity and welfare of the patient, and the right of both cannot be subjected to arbitrary and unreasonable legislative interference."

It Is Unlawful To Shoot Game From An Auto

With the touring season already in full swing, the California Fish and Game Commission has called the attention of motorists to the provision in the state law which prohibits the shooting of wild game from an automobile.

Representatives of the Fish and Game Commission state they had been receiving numerous complaints of cases where motorists were shooting game from automobiles and asked the Association's' cooperation in calling this violation of the law to the attention of the motorists of the state.

The Fish and Game Commission cited a section of the Penal Code which states that "every person, who in the State of California shoots at any game, bird or mamal, except whale, from a power boat, sail boat, automobile or aeroplane, is guilty of a misdemeanor."

Low Tax Rate Of El Cerrito Is Attractive

One of the fast growing sections about the bay at the present time is the town of El Cerrito. It is a development that comes partly due to the growing population of the east bay section, and in part due to the advantageous location of the city, so far as street car fares are concerned.

Another factor that is attracting people to the city is the low tax rate, credit for which is due to a great extent to Phil Lee, the mayor of the town. Lee, has served as the head of the city government, since the town was incorporated, and he has been a tireless worker for civic betterments, and street improvements.

The hillside section of the city is being rapidly developed and many new residents have purchased property and erected homes on their lots.

City Manager Of Berkeley To Address Lions

City Manager Edy of Berkeley, recently named for that position, is to be th espeaker at the meeting of the Richmond Lions club on Tuesday, July 24. He is reported to be an interesting speaker, and Fred S. Newsom, chairman of the day, is planning a meeting that will be noteworthy. Musical numbers will be given under the direction of Charles F. Donnelly.

Home of Comfort Demonstration Draws Hundreds

Arrangements have been made by the Miner company so that the demonstrations of the "electrical home" recently opened on Lowell avenue near Twenty-sixth street, are featured by musical concerts and teas. The hundreds of people visiting the place daily have been served tea every afternoon and evening, while a special concedt was given last evening. A similar concert will be given on tomorrow evening at the home and, as the open house will continue for only several days more, the public is urged to visit the place and see the modern electrical appliances.

Montana Man Makes Address To Pythians

An inter sting talk by H. L. Sweet, of Round Mountain, Montana, was a feature of the meeting last night at the meeting of Richmond Knights of Pythias in Pythian Castle. Tentative plans were made for conferring kinght rank next Friday evening.

Arrangements for the stunt to be put on by the lodge at Pittsburg are progressing rapidly under the charge of O. Carroll.

Few Days Left To Pay A Visit To Pacific Fleet

Residents of the interior counties who contemplate a visit to the ships of the Pacific Fleet at San Francisco should avail themselves of the opportunity without delay, it was announced yesterday. The fleet is to leave on July 9.

While Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday afternoon are officially designated as visiting days, some of the ships are open to visitors on other days.

Launches are run to the different battleships at regular intervals and the trip to the ships is filled with interest, especially to those who are making their first visit or to those who have not been aboard a war vessel for some years.

To these a comparison of old methods and new is said to be decidedly illuminating. The strides made in naval warfare and the introduction of modern equipment has been keeping pace with the advancement of other industries.

All persons are welcomed aboard the big ships and the workings of them are carefully explained.

Charles Renwick, Jr., Al Axelson, Harry Bonham, Joe Gurney and Al Freethy have returned from a two days' stay at Monte Rio and Guerneville on the Russian River.

DEMONSTRATION OF CAPABILITIES OF DOBLE CAR TO BE MADE TODAY

A public demonstration of the capabilities of the Doble steam car will be held at 1:30 this afternoon on Tenth street between Macdonald and Barrett avenues under the personal direction of Abner Doble, president of the Doble Steam Motors Corporation and inventor of the car which bears his name, according to an announcement yesterday by F. G. Cox, fiscal agent of the corporation.

"It is almost impossible to grasp the unusual capabilities of the Doble steam car without seeing it in action under severe conditions as the machine is entirely different from any self propelled vehicle on the market today," Cox declared in making the announcement. "Consequently we have planned this demonstration in order that the public may see at first hand the remarkable qualities of the Doble. The tests will show the reserve speed which the Doble has at command for a mere turn of the throttle, the power which is always present in the motor although it may be running at low speed, the flexibility of the machine under all conditions and its simplicity of operation and control. After witnessing this demonstration it will be easy to understand why automotive engineers throughout the country have hailed the Doble Steam car as the most remarkable motor car ever perfected and the last word in automotive transportation."

At a similar demonstration in San Francisco last week, the Doble steam car attained a speed of 67 miles per hour in one block from a standing start and was brought to a dead stop in five carlengths by the use of the foot breaks alone. Then to show the range of power without the use of gears which are unnecessary in a Doble, the car was driven at one quarter mile per hour. The flexibility and easy operation of the Doble was further demonstrated when the big car was driven continually, both forward and reverse, in a 42 foot circle. Automobile dealers and engineers from the entire bay district attended the San Francisco demonstration at the conclusion of which they congratulated Doble on the remarkable performance of his car which they declared presaged a brilliant commercial future for the machine.

In addition to directing the steam car through a series of tests today, Doble will explain the mechanical features of the machine and the mechanism of the steam generator, which is one of the premier factors in the success of the Doble. This new type of generator, Doble declares, has eliminated all the drawbacks of the old time steam car in that it generates a full head of steam from cold in 30 seconds on the turn of an electric switch and obviates boiler scale and tube troubles.

Downfall Of Clergyman Is Due To Liquor

BROOKLYN (N. Y.), July 5.—William D. Scott, who years ago was an Episcopal clergyman before he took to drink and was unfrocked, was sentenced to six months in the workhouse as a vagrant by Magistrate Reynolds. Scott was arrested as he stopped to pat the head of a 3-year-old girl, Anna Berg, in front of her home.

Scott had little to say and smiled with resignation over his sentence.

His story was told by Probation Officer Bergman. As a young man Scott took his degree of Bachelor of Arts at Toronto University. In Leipsig he received a degree in music and then entered the ministry. He married a Danish girl and accepted a parish at Salt Lake City.

He started drinking and his wife divorced him and went home. He asked to be unfrocked and came to New York. He had been arrested some fourteen times before and had served terms in the workhouse for disorderly conduct and intoxication.
